PART I: ACCESS TO INFORMATION FROM WRITTEN TEXTS (70 points)

Read the newsletter below and then answer questions 1-8.

The Internet Education Community

Dear Subscriber,

Thank you for joining the Internet Education Community (IEC), a group of people using the Internet in education. As a member, you will receive our weekly newsletter, IEC News, in which you can read reviews of educational websites recommended by our experts. Each section in IEC News is devoted to a different subject. Members are invited to suggest interesting websites for future newsletters.

Here are this week's recommendations:

BASIC SKILLS

TEACH ME

10 www.teachme.com

This website, which can be used at school or at home, is meant for children aged 6-8. Lessons are currently offered only in reading and writing, but more subjects will be added in the coming year. Use of the website costs only $2 a week.

MUSIC

15 CLINTJAZZ

www.clintjazz.net

On this website, famous jazz musician Clinton Conrad offers piano students a course in playing jazz. Each of the 15 piano lessons takes about 40 minutes. Conrad claims that the lessons are suitable for all levels. For more advanced students, it is in fact an excellent introduction to playing jazz piano. However, most beginners do not have the skills needed to complete the whole course.

GEOGRAPHY

WEATHER-AID

www.weatheraid.gov.uk

25 This government website provides information on weather conditions and climate change. Students from first to twelfth grade will find plenty of fun activities in the Learning Center. Teachers can take advantage of the Teachers' Center for help in preparing lessons on subjects related to the weather.

Note: The newsletter continues on page 3.

ART AND DESIGN

30 DICT-ART

www.dictart.com

This online dictionary of art was created by art teacher Bernard Delane. The definitions of the 700 terms are clear and well written, but many of them are too long. Moreover, the illustrations are disappointing. However, Delane promises to 35 shorten the definitions and improve the quality of the pictures in the near future.
